My husband is 69 and last month went to the hospital with severe pain and was diagnosed with Diverticulitis. He stayed in hospital for a few days then went home on antibiotics. It's been almost 4 weeks and he's having getting pain. It's not as bad but his lower bowel is very tender. He has lost 25 pounds since it started and he's not a big man.

Tuesday he was prescribed a second round of antibiotics and we are wondering if ivermectin would be better for him. He also had his prostate removed in 2018 due to cancer and we know wish we had known about ivermectin for that.

My [REDACTED] and she was one of the staff who were forced to take the first jab. She said no to the second one and was suspended because of it. We have lost faith in the system.

What do you recommend.?

Hi [REDACTED]

If you want to try Ivermectin for diverticulitis, you can, there isn't much research in this area but Ivermectin is a strong anti-inflammatory. There are no doctors in North America suicidal enough to prescribe it, people buy generic Ivermectin and use it.

Thank you [REDACTED]

for anti-inflammatory indications I always suggest Ivermectin at 0.5mg/kg/day for at least 3-4 weeks.

All the best!

William

Hello Dr. Makis great news with my husbands diverticulosis. He started the Pills last Wednesday Nov 13. He is doing so much better and getting very little pain compared to just a week ago.

It's amazing how he has changed in just a week. Before just driving in the car hurt on every little bump and he was so weak and tired.

I really think it's the ivermectin that helped as he is completely different than before he started. He is eating more and getting no pain like he used to after eating.

He will continue to take it for the full month as suggested. Thank you so much and please send the link [REDACTED]

Thanks again [REDACTED]

My Take...

Ivermectin should be available over the counter in Canada and the United States.

Certainly in a conservative province like Alberta.

Alberta Premier Danielle Smith won't do it of course, but thousands of Canadians are missing out on simple solutions, because weak politicians don't want to upset big pharma.
