Thousands of Australians injured by the COVID-19 vaccine have filed claims for compensation with the government and continue to wait...and wait...and wait...much like the situation in much of the Anglo/English-speaking world from the United Kingdom to Canada and the United States. In Australia Sydney, Criminal Lawyers report that as the vaccine injured wait as “their lives fall apart and suffer unnecessary duress because the Federal Government can’t get its act together calls to reform the Covid-19 Vaccine Claim Scheme grow in intensity Down Under.

While Services Australia has gone on the record acknowledging that the COVID-19 vaccine injury claims compensation program can be “complex” with long waits and lots of red tape one must ask the question why are governments allowing this to happen?

The legal news media reports that much like the government vaccination compensation schemes in the other aforementioned English-speaking countries, the injured typically must fend for themselves, left to chase applications, make continuous calls to get access to updates, and the like. Yet these are often extremely ill people—in some cases so ill as to be debilitated.

According to Sydney Criminal Lawyers, one couple reports that they have spent thousands of dollars on medical specialists and other health-related output just so that those particular injured parties can complete their COVID-19 vaccine injury application.

This horrible human tragedy comes at the expense of the Morrison Government's decision to empower both states and industry in Australia to promote COVID-19 vaccines, often funded by taxpayer money.

With the proof of eligibility for the COVID-19 vaccine injured, the toll on this highly vulnerable patient population becomes, in some cases, dangerous to deadly.

Unfortunately, reports the legal media channel, throughout the pandemic, governments, industry, and mainstream media all relentlessly pushed the message that vaccines were 'safe' despite the fact that early on, many people of all ages began to suffer signs of thrombosis and myocarditis as a direct result of vaccines.

The 'safety' of vaccines has also subsequently been called into question with allegations that Pfizer falsified trial data reports Sonia Hickey for Sydney Criminal Lawyers. The messaging starts to change as Hickey writes, "Governments around the world are now having to accept that the vaccines were not 'safe for all,' and now there is a mess to clean up.

The Sydney Criminal Layers piece is clear:

- Why are people in authority not acknowledging COVID-19 vaccine injured, many of whom are clearly suffering?

- Why did governments list them as safe and effective and often avoid disclosure of known risks, such as myocarditis?
- Why did governments not only in Australia but also across the West, in many cases, coerce people to get the vaccines even when the science was clear that they were not sterilizing vaccines?
- Why is government ignoring the obvious critical problems with the vaccine compensation schemes in Australia—even while people suffer?
