With thousands of COVID-19 vaccine-injured persons reporting that they are all but nonexistent across Australian society, a liberal MP has decided to step up and embrace their cause. In what represents a growing trend reported by TrialSite, liberals and mainstream media starting to acknowledge and even embrace the COVID-19 vaccine injured, Russell Broadbent now becomes an advocate for COVID-19 vaccine injuries in Australia.

Reported in mainstream media Sky News, reporters Amy Landsey and Tyrone Clarke find the MP meeting with several COVID-19 vaccine-injured victims personally, all part of a campaign to elicit government response and then help.

TrialSite has reported that similar efforts are unfolding in the United States, where COVID-19 vaccine patient injury group React19 has grown to, by some estimates, over 30,000 members.

TrialSite's founder Daniel O'Connor shared with this writer that “surprisingly, React19 co-founder Brianne Dressen reports that dozens of politicians from across both parties are now in contact with the increasingly influential group.”

He continued, “There are a number of important initiatives associated with the vaccine injured, including some key efforts at React19, some of which are game-changing but remain confidential at this point.”

Back to Australian mainstream media, recently, MP Broadbent went on the record to discuss not only the plight of the COVID-19 vaccine injured but also actions that must be taken from a humanistic perspective.

Talking to a Sky News host, Chris Kenny Broadbent declared:

“It’s very distressing to have these people face-to-face and be speaking to them when you see some of them are so severely damaged.”

Among other injured, the MP met with a man named Jacob, a “tough as nails” fencing contractor that had to transition to truck driving due to his COVID-19 vaccine injury.

Check out the link to the media entry. TrialSite has collected significant data points suggesting 2023 represents the year the scandal involving COVID-19 vaccine injured come into focus in the mainstream.

The Liberal Party is conservative. It is not "liberal" in the general sense. However, with many important aspects of the "left" Labor party being overtaken by arguably illiberal woke, social justice warrior, identity politics ideologies, it could be argued that by comparison the Liberal Party supports important elements of liberalism.

So the article, in stating that MP Russell Broadbent is a "liberal MP" is incorrect in some important ways. He is a "Liberal MP". https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Liberal\_Party\_of\_Australia . At the federal level, The Liberal Party and its predecessor has been in coalition with the rural-oriented National Party (previously known as the Country Party) since the 1920s.

I don't know much about Sky News Australia or how many people it reaches. It is part of the Murdoch empire - News Corp: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Sky\_News\_Australia . Murdoch-owned news.com.au reported on Dr Kerryn Phelps' COVID-19 quasi-vaccine injury and the severe disability her wife has lived with since minutes after her injection: <https://www.news.com.au/technology/science/human-body/dr-kerryn-phelps-reveals-devastating-covid-vaccine-injury-says-doctors-have-been-censored/news-story/0c1fa02818c99a5ff65f5bf852a382cf>

Prof. Kerryn Phelps is a widely known - and as far as I know, widely respected - former president of the Australian Medical Association. The newspaper "The Age" provided cursory coverage of the story: <https://www.theage.com.au/politics/federal/not-anti-vaxxers-dr-kerryn-phelps-says-she-suffered-covid-vaccine-injury-calls-for-more-research-20221220-p5c7ry.html>

but as far as know, The Guardian and the Australian Broadcasting Corporation (govt. funded), both bastions of left/woke/mainstream thought, ignored it, as did other mainstream media companies here.

I was not familiar with Russell Broadbent: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Russell\_Broadbent He is the member of the house of reps for the south-eastern Victorian division: https://en.wikipedia.org/wiki/Division\_of\_Monash . He has been the member for all but 9 years since 1990.

From the Wikipedia page: "Broadbent has been identified as a member of the Liberal Party's moderate (or "small-l liberal") [citation needed]" "Small l liberal" is an Australian term for "liberal" to distinguish it from a member of the Liberal party. The account of his positions given in the Wikipedia page does indeed indicate that he has argued against some of the more conservative / right-leaning aspects of Liberal Party policy.

His speech about the vaccine injured could not be more earnest or heartfelt: <https://twitter.com/CoVerseAU/status/1622800655823048705> .
